The Sacred Harp is an anthology of lively hymns that has been in continuous publication since 1844. The music is printed with four different shapes for the noteheads corresponding to the syllables of the scale, “fa sol la fa sol la mi fa,” to help people learn to sight-read. In the traditional style, the music is first vocalized by singing it through using the fasola syllables. The hymns are sung unaccompanied, and the singers typically face each other sitting on the four sides of a hollow square, and sing at full volume with a strong beat. This is no genteel choir music, but an exuberant outpouring of sound and feeling!
